"Then," said the gentleman with emphasia, "I can tell you with authority that he will not turn over his hand to secure it. It must come to him in the way I have described or he will not accept it."

In opposition to this view of the situation was the statement of a gentleman from the interior of the State, who is an acknowledged authority in political matters. This gentleman said that both Conkling and Platt not only desired to be re-elected, but are bending all their energies to secure the faifillment of their wishes, and have been doing so ever since tar Route mail fraud has been discovered in the Yellowstone country, where thousands of dollars were expended for carry ing one letter back and forth across the wishes, and have been doing so ever since the day of resignation. "Oppice Postoppics Inspectors, on Omana, Nea, May 16, 1881.]

"Sin:—In the case of Route No. 36, 156, White Sulphar Springs, Montans, to Fort Custer, I have to report that it is my belief that this route is located not far from the "milky way." When at Fort Custer a pouch came into the postoffice while I was sitting there, and somebody cried out, "Mail!" I asked the assistant postmaster, "What mail is this?" and he answered that it was the mail from White Sulphur! more formal conference has been arranged for to-morrow, when a plan of action will be decided upon. For the present, however, it was fully the intention of Conkling and Platt, they said, to place themselves in the hands of their friends—that is, their names will be used at Albany as candidates for re-election. The leaders of the "machine" will go to Albany Monday and begin an active canvass for the re-election of the Senators. All the powers of the organization will be used for this purpose. 'What mail is this?' and he answered that it was the mail from White Sulphur Springs. I asked him whether, for God's sake, they were running a seven-day-a-week route between White Sulphur Springs and Custer, and if so what was the use of extending it across to Fort Custer?' Carleson and Junction are on the north side of the Yellowstone, and on the south side as far as the Wyoming line is a Crow Indian reservation, and since no astilements saye those made by the War Department for the accommodation of the Department for the accommodation of the army can be made under the existing treaties, and therefore no postoffice can or do exist south of the Yellow treaties, and therefore no postoffices can or do exist south of the Yellowstone river, in Montans, now what purpese, under heavens, there could be for having a daily route from Carleson to Fort Custer, lifty miles, I could not conceive. The Assistant Post-master, Mr. Wintermute, explained by saying that the thing was a fraud, and that he would tell me all about it. He did not know how the service came to be placed on the route, but presumed it was done by Delegate Maginnis, of Montans, last year, and that the first he knew of it was the arrival of a man with a mail pouch from the direction of Carleson. He (Wintermute) opened the pouch and found that it contained just one piece of mail addressed to the firm of which he was a member. He returned this plece of mail to the pouch by way of a joke, locked it, and gave it back to the man from whom he had received it. This piece of mail seesawed back and forth between Carleson and Fort Custer until it threatened to wear out, and so the Postmuster at Carle-He Will Consent to be Voicd For if His Friends Insist, But Not Unless Plats is United with Him "For Better for they voluntarily relinquished a week ago to-day, was definitely sattled yeaterday. This conference was suggested and arranged by the Governor. He promised to be present himself and personally urge Conkling to again become The agent continues:
This seems to have caused a change, for in reducing the route from a daily to a weekly soon after, the Postmaster, who is post trader at Fort Custar and a friend of Magianis, the then delegate to Congress, returned and took charge of the postofiles bimself. Presently, as Wintermute says, the year devil was to pay as the Postmaster. the very devil was to pay, as the Postmast going to lose the whole Musell-shell coun personally urge Conkling to again become a candidate. He was expected on the 11 o'clock train from Albany, but he falled to appear and the conference proceeded try less that mail service was put back t a daily, &c. The Postmaster seemedeeply moved. He did not like to admit that his assistant had deceived the Depart that his assistant had deceived the Department, when he knew he had stated but the simple truth, and so he fixed up some kind of a telegram to Maginnis stating that Wintermute's report was 'mauthorized, &c. The result of the dispatch to Maginnis was that the route was put back to seven trips a week, and this although the Postmacter and Maginnis (certainly the former) knew that the reatoration to a daily was a fraud upon the Government. My belief is that the whole route is supplied vasily in excess of the needs of, the people, or the needs of the Department, and therefore respectfully advise that the orders, &c., on the route be placed in the hands of an inspecter for investigation.

The Marshal and his assistants had seized the boat, and the warrant was issued upon the ground of an attempt to provoke a breach of the peace. As soon as the arrest was made the Salt Valley cut her fastenings and floated out into the river, and started on her way to Pittaburgh. There is diversity of opinion upon the question. Judge Miller claims that the boat could not be detained upon the Sabbath day. Others claim that this not being a port of entry the warrant could not be served upon her. The Sabbath afternoon was rather marred by the legal praceedings, and the streets were quite lively in the vicinity of the Mayor's office. A SINGULAR OCCURRENCE.
